Source: addresspollution.org Commissioned by the Central Office of Public Interest, scientists at Imperial College have undertaken detailed analysis of mean levels of pollution. Dividing the UK into 20m-by-20m squares and using emissions data to model concentration levels.

They found that the air on doorsteps of nearly eight million homes in the UK, exceed at least one of the World Health Organisation's proposed limits for particulate matter or nitrogen dioxide (NO2).

There is a strong legal argument that estate agents would be in breach of the Consumer Protection from Unfair Trading Regulations 2008 if they failed to inform prospective buyers that pollution outside a property could harm health. Surveyors and solicitors have similar obligations.

Since last year the estate agent trade body has asked owners to disclose poor local air quality before they put their homes up for sale or rent.

FIGURES UPDATED BY ICSTM APRIL 2022

	Address Rows in red indicate breach of World Health Organisation (WHO) PM2.5 limits.	PM2.5 WHO limit is 5mcg/m3. No healthy limit of PM2.5. Can cause asthma, respiratory inflammation and promote cancers	PM10 WHO limit is 15mcg/m3. No healthy limit of PM10. PM10 affects lung development in children.	NO2 WHO limit is 10mcg/m3. Exposure (for a year or more) to 30mcg leads to a 5.5% increased risk of disease related mortality.	Trajectory since 2021 figures	Address in AQMA5
